STATE POLICIES IN BRIEF As of JANUARY 1, 2015

Sex and HIV Education

BACKGROUND: Beginning in the 1970s, concerns over teen pregnancy– and later HIV/AIDS– galvanized widespread public support for sex education in schools. Most states today have a policy requiring HIV education, usually in conjunction with broader sex education. Meanwhile, as debate over the relative merits of abstinence-only-until-marriage versus more comprehensive approaches has intensified, states have enacted a number of specific content requirements. This brief summarizes state-level sex and HIV education policies, as well as specific content requirements, based on a review of state laws, regulations and other legally binding policies.

HIGHLIGHTS:

General Requirements: Sex Education and HIV Education

- 22 states and the District of Columbia mandate sex education.
  - 20 states and the District of Columbia mandate both sex education and HIV education.
  - 2 states only mandate sex education.

- 33 states and the District of Columbia mandate HIV education; of these states, 13 mandate only HIV education.

- 27 states and the District of Columbia mandate that, when provided, sex and HIV education programs meet certain general requirements.
  - 13 states require that the instruction be medically accurate.
  - 26 states and the District of Columbia require that the information be appropriate for the students' age.
  - 8 states require that the program must provide instruction that is appropriate for a student's cultural background and not be biased against any race, sex or ethnicity.
  - 2 states prohibit the program from promoting religion.

- 37 states and the District of Columbia require school districts to involve parents in sex education, HIV education or both.
  - 22 states and the District of Columbia require that parents be notified that sex education or HIV education will be provided.
  - 3 states require parental consent for students to participate in sex education or HIV education.
  - 35 states and the District of Columbia allow parents to remove their children from instruction.
